

Questions for Media & Children wrap up:

1. How did the media intervention activity go? What surprised you? What did you learn that you'd try to use if you did it again?
2. Which media and media products that we've seen and discussed were most surprising to you (or most different from the ones you had as a child)? Why?
3. Which topics/discussions made you most optimistic and most worried about the roles of media in children's lives today?
4. Has this class made you more or less optimistic about the roles media will play in the lives of the next generation of children (e.g., your children)?
5. Based on the evolution of media from your grandparents, to your parents, to your childhood, to today's children, what do you think the media world will be like for the next generation of children (e.g., your children)?
6. If/when you have children, how will you try to ensure that their media experiences are positive? How much will you try to limit their media exposure?
7. Has our class affected the ways you think about (and evaluate news stories and studies about) children and media? If so, in what way(s)?
